Trizone GC™

TRIZONE GC JAW RANGE AND GECKO CLAW DETAIL

Everything the standard reload does, plus a solution to the problem every stapling surgeon knows — tissue that creeps out of the jaw as the staples form. The Gecko Claw surface resists both lateral and longitudinal movement, so the tissue that was measured is the tissue that gets stapled.

The channel of the I-beam is polished at the bend, which reduces friction as the tissue enters and leaves the jaw

Key Differentiators

01 Gecko Claw surface

Restrains sideways and lengthways slip, holding tissue still through the firing stroke.

02 Polished I-beam channel

Lower friction at the bend — tissue enters and exits without dragging.

03 Unequal-height staple design

Cutting and suturing tuned to leave blood supply intact at the anastomosis.

04 Fresh blade every reload

The cutting edge is never reused, which keeps the transection clean and reduces tissue drag.

01 Isometric height retainer

Holds the anvil geometry constant while the staples form, for uniform staple formation.

02 Safety interlock

A spent reload cannot be fired again.

03 360° rotation, 45° swing

Full shaft rotation with articulation both ways to reach the target site.
